FAQ: Christopherson Business Travel vs Google Flights or Kayak

Q: I am trying to book flights for a VCU business trip and found flights on Google Flights and Kayak much cheaper than Christopherson Business Travel (CBT)! What gives?

A: There could be a few different reasons why CBT is showing higher fares than what you are seeing on Google Flights:

• Many times, travel search engines such as Google Flights or Kayak will show fares that are in basic economy class. The University does not allow CBT to book this class of service as basic economy class due to it’s heavily restricted nature

• Travel Search Engines rely heavily on hacker fares and third party vendors which put the employee at risk of not having support in the event of flight cancellations, weather emergencies, or missing flights, or additional costs.

• Travel Search Engines will display fares which are showing as published by the airlines, however, this doesn’t mean the fare is necessarily available. Many times, once you click on the selected fare, you will be prompted to choose one of multiple booking options to book that fare. Once you do, the fare is actually higher than what was initially quoted.

Scenario: It seems the employee would save $130 by booking outside of CBT, let’s take a look at what happens!

Google Flights: Lower fare booked through my choice of third party booking sites, at both sites, the lowest fare available though, is $673.93; this is for Basic Economy Class; upgrading to Standard Economy changes the fare to $746.93

CBT - $746.93 for the same flights

Kayak: The lower fare offered did not allow any changes, Flexible Ticket was offered for a slightly higher fare; this ticket was offered by a third party supplier who uses a la carte pricing, additional charges were added to check baggage, pre-select seats, and have a basic level of support that did not provide a quick response time in the case of an emergency. Total cost would have been $825.88
